

Copyright Tatjana Vujovic

A Dog's Breakfast

written by

Tatjana Vujovic

614-271-7024
TVUJOVIC@depaul.edu

Copyright Tatjana Vujovic

INT. KITCHEN - DAY

Two mugs rest on a pristine granite countertop to the left of a Keurig K-Classic and a full K-Cup Pod Carousel. A thriving succulent rests nearby. One mug bears a Starbucks crest, the other is chipped with a picture of a hungover koala.

A stainless steel fridge is covered in assorted magnets, images, and postcards mainly from Australia. A few magnets from New York and NYU are intermixed.

The freezer door features an oversized magnetic white board that displays a chore list. All chores are marked as complete.

CUT TO:

INT. KITCHEN - DAY

A used K-Cup Pod is abandoned in the opened Keurig. The koala mug rests in the sink along with a blue mug, their interiors are stained with coffee. Two dishes are stacked next to the sink, topped with a half eaten piece of toast.

The counter is covered in crumbs and small dried-up coffee spills. The dying succulent and the empty K-Cup Carousel contrast the white Starbucks mug which is the only clean object in the kitchen.

The chore list on the fridge is noticeably longer and all chores are incomplete. All the magnets and images crowd the chore list except for a koala magnet that holds a new strip of photos from a photo booth showing a couple kissing.

CUT TO:

INT. KITCHEN - DAY

The Starbucks mug stands alone on the freshly cleaned countertop in its space next to the Keurig. A new colorful succulent rests nearby the full K-Cup Pod Carousel.

The chores on the chore list are all marked complete. The only magnets on the fridge are from New York and NYU. A lone postcard from Australia remains.

A green and gold save the date card is stuck on the center of the fridge with a koala magnet.

FADE OUT.